Northern Recruitment Group (NRG) awarded First Class Best Companies for 2nd year

NRG is delighted to have been awarded a first class Best Companies award for the second year in a row.

The Best Companies accreditation scheme follows the Michelin star style with companies awarded "ones to watch", one star for first class, two stars for outstanding and three stars for extraordinary performance.

The award rounds up what was an exciting year for the business in terms of some key business wins and strategic developments. During the course of the year, NRG positioned the business into four key business streams – Recruitment, Executive Search and Selection, Managed Services/RPO and talent development, and also became one of the first UK recruitment companies to launch an iPhone App. 2010 was also the first year NRG entered the Best Companies award, which is based upon employee engagement and feedback – something that is close to the heart of the company.

Group Managing Director, Therese Liddle said “We are dedicated at making NRG one of the best companies to work for and are therefore delighted to have not only been awarded a Best Companies award again – by our staff – but retained our First Class, One Star ranking. We continually invest in our staff through communication, training and development throughout the year and the success of NRG is based upon the talented individuals that work here – acknowledged by the ongoing quality feedback we receive from clients and candidates. In fact in 2010, Cherith Smith, one of our Account Managers, became the REC’s top student of the year for her Diploma in Recruitment Practice.”

“For businesses to achieve good results during the economic climate we’re all facing, we know how important it is to add value both internally to staff and externally to clients and candidates” says Therese, “We feel that a First Class Best Companies accreditation is certainly something that adds value to our business, not only when it comes to attracting and retaining the brightest talent to work here, it also aligns us with some of the country’s leading businesses, who also have Best Companies accreditation, and is therefore something to be proud of.
